STATEMENT OF MARK FABIANI

Special Counsel to the San Diego Chargers

December 6, 2006

For the last four years the Chargers have been working hard to find a publicly-acceptable way to build a Super Bowl-quality stadium in the San Diego region. As the New Year approaches, the Chargers are committed to continuing exploration of possible sites in Chula Vista, National City and perhaps elsewhere in San Diego County. When cities from outside the County contact the team after January 1, 2007, we will listen to what they have to say, explain our situation, tell them that we are still working hard to find a solution in San Diego County, and politely decline further discussions for the time being.
